Settling Into Cambridge and Married Life!

Well, we've been living in Cambridge now for three months, and we're finally starting to feel like we're settling in! We have started to make friends with people at church and are both enjoying our jobs (see below).

We are renting a little semi-detached house in a suburb of Cambridge called Cherry Hinton. We are right on the edge of Cherry Hinton, and can see the farmer's fields from our bedroom! The house was unfurnished, so we have slowly been filling it with furniture that we've managed to get our hands on from friends, family and IKEA! Its starting to feel like home, especially now we've begun putting pictures and photos on the wall.

We have decided to go to a church called St. Barnabas, which is in the centre of Cambridge. It is very lively and there are a lot of young people there to get to know! It is very similar to St. Thomas', the church we both went to in Lancaster!

Al's Work

I am currently working as a "Database Analyst" for a company called Wyvern Crest. I am basically involved in running huge mailing lists and databases, managing the data, and doing a little bit of programming with the in-house software. Our clients include The Economist, Time Magazine, The Body Shop, and many, many others! At the moment I am involved in managing data for more obscure magazines like Ports International, Mobile Europe and Asian Electricity! Although the job isn't that exciting, the people I work with are good fun, and there is always a nice atmosphere, even in moments of stress. The office is in Ely, about a 40 minute drive away – so commuting is a bit of a problem, but I'm coping at the moment and journey isn't stressful, but a time to relax!

Ang's Work

Most of you should know I'm doing statistics for medical research. Although I wasn't enjoying it at first – its getting much better as I get involved in more varied projects. Cycling to work is fun (only 10 mins!!) – and I'm slowly getting to know people at work. My PhD viva is on the 10th Jan (an oral examination with two examiners) – that's when I find out if I will be awarded my doctorate (prayers are much appreciated)!

This is the house that we're living in, in Cambridge.
